CANDIDATE OVERVIEW

This candidate is a recent Auburn University Aerospace Engineering graduate who is looking to transition into commercial construction and build a career on the project/field side of the industry. The candidate brings a strong technical and analytical foundation along with hands-on civil engineering exposure through work with Auburn's Stormwater Research Facility. That experience included supporting stormwater testing, field/test setups, soil-related testing, and documenting project results. The candidate is particularly interested in gaining hands-on construction experience and developing within a larger general contractor environment.
